PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

The Public Health Assistant Certificate is a programme aimed at giving students the knowledge and skills needed to work as a Public Health Assistant, especially in Local Authorities.

Rapid development and urbanization have impacted the environment, leading to a surge in the need to understand how these factors affect human health. This leads to the need to study environmental health and matters related to it to control and address the problems that arise.

This course can produce skilled and capable personnel in the field of urban health.

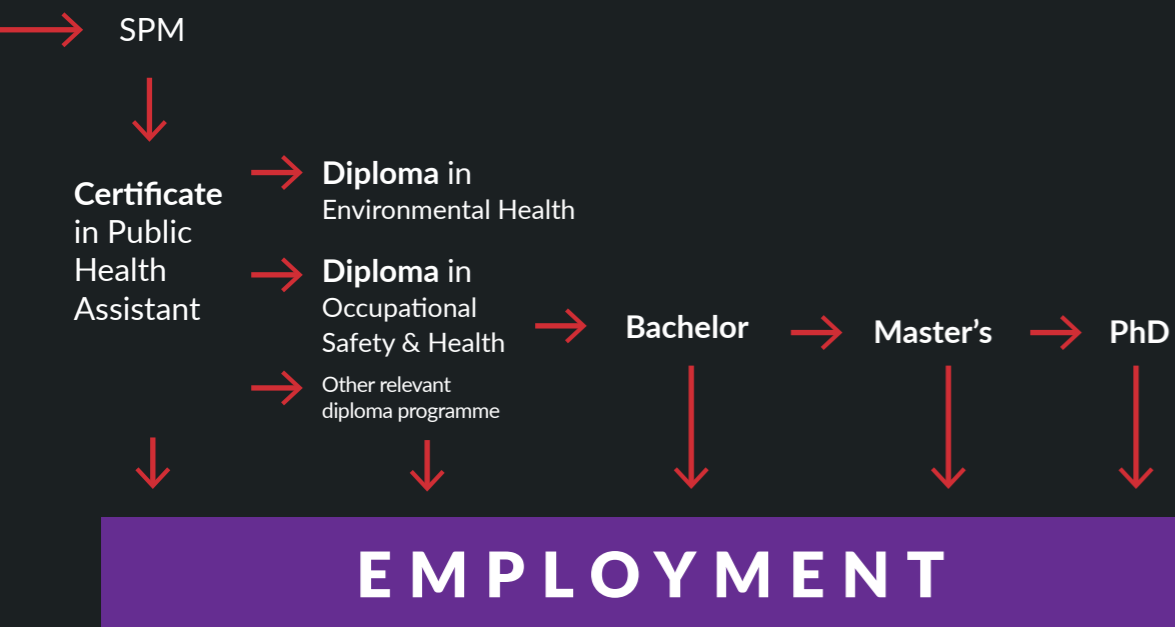

Career Opportunities

After completing the course, graduates will have the opportunity to serve as Public Health Assistant in the Ministry of Health Malaysia, Local Authorities, and other Government Agencies. In addition, students can further their studies up to the Diploma in Environmental Health, Diploma in Occupational Safety & Health, and other relevant diploma programme levels.
